Senior Of The Week Freddie Moore

"I CAN"

"Can't" is a word that is foe to ambition. An enemy ambush to shatter your will. Its prey is forever a man with a mission. And bows but to courage and patience and still. So hate it with hatred that's deep and undying. For once it is welcomed it will break any man. So whatever the goal you are seeking, keep trying. And answer this demon by saying "I can."

Six Full Periods: A Student's Woe

With apologies to "Sixteen Tons," Coach, our teacher, wanted to talk.

About the game with pencil and chalk.

Ten big sentences we had to diagram.

In the third period English exam.

Twenty - five pages we were told to read.

At a very fast, back-breaking speed.

Fourth period found me in study hall.

Getting a seat next to the wall.

The teacher stood over by the door.

Grading papers and recording each score.

In the cafeteria I found a place.

I tried to eat in a limited space.

Eating my lunch and drinking milk.

On a table cloth not made of silk.

To science class I went next.

All the symbols were in the text.

We had a lecture in the lab.

Experimenting with coca cola and tab.

The sixth period I could play.

In physical ed we made the day.

The last bell rings and I start for the door.

My legs are aching and my feet are sore.

I studied six full hours.

My day is made.

But homework assignments are a part of my grade.

I'll go to Saint Peter.

But I just can't say -

Mini, Midi, Maxi And Pants

The girls are partially free with their clothing apparel now in Elba High School. Mr. Lamar Poley, principal of the school, called all the girls from grades 7 through 12 to the auditorium on October 15, 1970. He expressed his views on the apparel worn by the girls. He said that he did not mind pants suits as long as they were appropriate. When asked by one of the girls about maxi-length dresses he replied, "If worn with good taste and good grooming the length of the dress was determined by how it was worn. As to questions about the mid length he misunderstood the word for mini and answered, "We have already talked about the mini!"

By this statement he certainly meant no mini's. About the mid he had the same answer as about the maxi.

Even though the teachers thought they were to be allowed these privileges, also, they found out they were not. Mr. Elmer Taylor, superintendent of the schools, said that the teachers could not do so, because they could not make such rules for the association. However, this was not the case of the teachers, they only meant to change the rules for the Elba High School teachers.

The next time you think you dislike the teachers and Mr. Poley remember they gave you - the girls - a few more privileges. USE THEM. DON'T ABUSE THEM.

DEWEY C. KENDRICK SENT TO GERMANY

Army Specialist Four Dewey C. Kendrick, 20, son of Mrs. Trudye Kendrick, Route 5, Elba, was among the 11,000 troops of the 1st Infantry Division who left Ft. Riley, Kan., Oct. 4-10, to be airlifted to Germany to participate in exercise "Reforger II."

The big red one soldier departed from Forbes Air Force Base in Topeka, Kan., and landed at one of three West German Airfields, Rhein Main, Ramstein, or Echterdingen.

A few hours later, the troops picked up weapons, tanks and armored personnel carriers, which had been prepositioned in Europe, and departed to the exercise site near the Czechoslovakian border.

During the five - day training exercise, the division opposed aggressive forces from the 3rd Infantry Division, regularly stationed in Germany, and the German 35th Panzer Grenadier Brigade.

Reforger II was designed to test U. S. Army deployment from stateside bases in defending Western Europe with NATO forces.

A similar exercise, Reforger I, was held in Germany in January 1969.

Washington Report

by GEORGE ANDREWS
Member of Congress
Third District of Ala.

Overloads of organized crime who use the law to their own advantage and bombing fanatics who ignore it completely will find no comfort at all in last week's House passage of the Organized Crime Control Act.

Organized crime is a business. Estimates are that the racket grosses from $30 to 60 billion from a no comfort at all in last string of sources, including prostitution, pornography, gambling, and narcotics, along with legitimate busnesses which provide revenue to underwrite illegal operations.

The Organized Crime Control Act will make it easier to get and use evidence against Mafia chiefs, increase penalties for crimes, protect witnesses and take new action against gambling and terrorist bombings.

Under provisions of the bill, a sentence of up to 25 years can be meted out to a defendant with two prior felony convictions or one whose felony offense was committed as part of a "pattern of criminal conduct," or one whose offense was committed in the furtherance of a conspiracy of three or more to engage in this pattern of criminal conduct.

The bill also allows the Government, as well as the defendant, to appeal a judge's decision so that the appeals court could increase the sentence.

Thus, the House bill authorizes one maximum sentence for ordinary offenders and a greater maximum for more dangerous offenders, and considering past failures to get convictions, this is the way things should be.

A recent study based on FBI sentencing data, shows that two-thirds of La Cosa Nostra members included in the study and indicated by the Federal Government since 1960 have faced maximum jail terms of only five years or less.

Fewer than one-fourth have received the maximum jail terms, and the sentences of the rest have averaged only 40 to 50 percent of the maximums.

A major provision of the bill seeks to end the infiltration of legitimate business by organized crime, by prohibiting the investment of money, collected through racketeering, into a business engaged in interstate commerce.

In addition to facing penalties of up to $25,000 in fines and up to 20 years in prison, the hoodlum-turned-businessman faces forfeiture of any interest that he has gained in a business in violation of the criminal provision of this act.

Gambling, probably the most profitable of the racket enterprises, gets special treatment in this bill. Federal jurisdiction is extended to all major illegal gambling operations.

All illegal gambling business is defined in the bill as one which is carried on in violation of state or local law, which involves five or more persons who conduct, finance, manage or own all or part of the enterprise and which is in substantially continuous operation for over 30 days or has a gross revenue of more than $2,000 in a single day.

The President's Crime Commission reported in 1967 that enforcement officials believe that illegal betting on horse races, lotteries and sporting events totals about $20 billion with a net profit of $6 to 7 billion a year.

Action to stem the tide of bombings throughout the country by black extremists and others of the Lunatic Left was a must in the Organized Crime Control Act.

Title XI authorizes the FBI to investigate bombings on our college campuses, and it requires Federal licenses of all explosives manufacturers, importers and dealers.

Permits are required of all users who depend on interstate commerce to obtain explosives.

No explosives can be distributed to persons under 21 years of age, drug addicts, mental defectives, fugitives from justice, and persons indicted for or convicted of certain crimes.

For the benefit of the current brand of campus revolutionary, the definition of "explosives" in the bill has been broadened to include incendiary devices such as "Molotov cocktails."

In an effort to strengthen the laws against corruption, the act authorizes the impounding of special federal grand juries which may submit reports of non-criminal misconduct by officials.

Witnesses, so important in the prosecution of Mafia bigwigs, will receive Government protection in organized crime cases, under the act's provisions.

Congress is determined to vigorously attack crime on yet another front - the prosecution of Mafia bigwigs, will receive Government protection in organized crime cases, under the act's provisions.

House is proof enough of that determination.

TOUR OF THE ORIENT

By Mrs. Kimmey

The British Colony of Hong Kong has three parts, a guide who took us on a bus tour. Only ten thousand people live on the New Territories. The airport is on Kowloon and only about ten minutes drive from the hotel where we stayed. Our hotel was located on the water-front and from our window we could see the magnificent harbor, busy during the day with bustling sampans, junks and ocean-going liners and leave nearly every day. The hotel joins the Ocean Terminal with its shopping center, the largest in Southeast Asia, on three levels. Just outside one door is the pedestrian ferry which runs frequently to Hong Kong Island throughout the day. Around the corner in contrast is a street with small shops over which the merchant and his family live. On the sidewalk mixed with the merchandise were trays of fish and shrimp set out to dry. Bamboo poles used for drying their clothes extended from the upstairs window over the street.

We took a bus tour of the island. After crossing on the ferry our first stop was in "Tiger Balm Garden," a kind of Disney Land built by the maker of the ointment which is supposed to cure whatever you have! He had three wives and the home of the favorite one still stands just outside the garden. We drove to the top of Victoria Peak from which point the whole island is visible. It has great contrasts with modern skyscrapers and hillside covered with wooden shacks built by refugees from Red China. We came down the mountain by cable car and had tea on the shore of Repulse Bay, where the island was successfully defended during the last World War. We then visited Aberdeen, a floating fishing village. We took pictures of the sampans tied to the shore or anchored near by. Many of the people who live here have never lived on land.

One day we journeyed to Portuguese Macao, a small peninsula ceded to Portugal in 1557 by China in gratitude for help given in one of her many wars. The trip was made by hydrofoil—a boat which rides on ski-like runners just above the surface of the water. It is fast and

Careful Gunsmen

Keep Hunting

A Safe Sport

Hunting is a great sport, and the careful hunter will keep it a safe sport. Before going to the woods this fall, be sure to get a red or orange hat, or vest and make sure other hunters can see you clearly. Treat every gun as if it were loaded, says Earl F. Kennamer, Extension Wildlife Specialist. Keep the muzzle pointed in a safe direction, and don't carry the gun so it points behind. When the gun isn't in use, keep the action open.

Know your gun and ammunition, and keep only the right sized shells for the gun you're using in your hunting jacket, says the specialist. Don't mix cartridges. A 20-gauge shell will slip part of the way through a 12-gauge barrel, and a 12-gauge shell fired behind it will burst the barrel.

Always know where your companions are, warns Kennamer. The friend you thought was on your left may be the moving object in the brush ahead. Never fire unless you can positively identify the game.

dustry and the country makes its money from tourism and gambling. There are hundreds of casinos and they never close. We drove up one of the seven hills there and saw many Buddhist temples. We stopped about one hundred feet from a high wall and arched gate which leads into Red China. On the way back down we passed through a village where young children were putting fire crackers into their pockets. If they got to it is at night. No pictures were allowed as the dhists believe if you take their picture their soul goes into the picture and they are left without one. The hotel has the third largest crystal chandelier in the world which is beautiful. The money for it was made in a casino in the basement. The lunch was almost an American meal.

Back in Kowloon we had a sunset tour of the harbor by water taxi and ate in a floating restaurant. Chopsticks were used but we did not have to sit on the floor. Before returning home we spent some time in Honolulu. On the way there we regained the day we had lost going over. It was a more interesting journey than words can ever describe. I hope that all of you who have read this condensed account, may someday see it for yourself.
